Concrete Dosing Machine

Technical Specification :

Concrete dosing machine is used to store and measure various sand and gravel aggregates in concrete or asphalt mixing plants, and transport them to the mixer using the pre-set formula, and mix with cement, fly ash, mineral powder, additives, water, etc.

The raw materials such as stones, sand, and blocks are transported by concrete machinery, and the raw materials are conveyed to the main machine through a belt scale. the concrete mixing ratio is set by the batching machine, and the mixing ratio is automatically batched according to the set mixing ratio. it is generally suitable for general construction. construction sites, roads, bridges and other projects.

Main features:

This series of products have the characteristics of multiple structural forms, flexible combination methods, high weighing accuracy, simple operation and high degree of automation.

The machine body can adopt a split layout structure to facilitate the loading of various materials.

The batching of various materials can be automatically completed according to the concrete proportion set by the user.

It can be combined with the corresponding concrete mixing unit to synthesize mixing plants of different specifications, which is convenient and practical.

Classification:

According to the number of material grades, it is divided into two buckets (silo), three buckets (silo), four buckets (silo)

According to the matched mixer model, it is divided into: PL(D)800, 1200, 1600, 2400, 3200

According to the batching measurement method, it is divided into: cumulative measurement of each material, separate measurement of each material
